

Deborah Scioli

September 4, 1953 - April 5, 2025

Deborah Scioli (nee Scott) , age 71, of Quinton Township, NJ, passed away peacefully on April 5, 2025, following an extended illness. Debbie was predeceased by her cherished son, Patrick Joseph McBride (Barbara) of Pedricktown, NJ, and her dedicated spouse, Danny. She is survived by her daughter, Kathleen (née McBride) Pompper (Jeffery) of Alloway, NJ, and her treasured grandchildren, including Dennis Allen, Diana Pompper and Holly Pompper.

She was the eighth of nine children born to Ethel (née Hamilton Fisher) and Preston Scott. Deborah often spoke fondly of her childhood in Lewes and Rehoboth, Delaware, where her extended family were pillars of the community and kept a watchful eye on the well-known “Scott kids.” A strong advocate for education, Deborah and her husband, Danny, took great pride in supporting their grandchildren's academic journeys, ensuring they had the opportunity to attend the schools best suited to their needs. She was also a devoted animal lover, with a special affection for her cherished American Staffordshire Terrier, Spike.

Debbie was an avid Pepsi drinker and lover of suspense and murder-mystery novels. She had a sharp wit, a dark sense of humor, and a knack for keeping everyone on their toes. She was known to joke, “I know a thousand and one ways to kill someone without anyone ever finding out”—a line that never failed to make people laugh or nervously sip their drinks. Her quick mind and keen perception made her both entertaining and impossible to fool. Beneath her boldness was a fierce love for her family and an unwavering loyalty to those she held dear.
