“ The summer before Gloria and Joe were married, I spent a few days with her and her mother in AC. Her mother had a small apartment for the summer. Gloria and I were jumping waves in the ocean and all of a sudden, the undertow became very strong and started to carry us out into the deep water. We were both swimming for all we were worth, to get to shore. Then Gloria said to me that she couldn't make it and said, "I'll float on my back, you try to get to shore and tell the life guard to come and get me!" Thank God I made it! The life guard took his boat to rescue Gloria. Finally, we were safe on the beach and going to the blanket where her mother was sitting. This is the funny part...her mother said to us, "hey, someone is drowning over there." We never told her about the experience because we knew she would be very upset. I will always remember Gloria for this and all the other good times that we had together over the years...her sister-in-law Julia Hogan. Rest In Peace.
